Cuban Exiles Prepare New Thrusts at Castro

MIAMI, Fla., July 23 (AP). — New exile thrusts against Fidel Castro appeared in the making today as invasion veterans and commandos prepared to move to Central American bases.

The development came as the United States Government remained adamant in its stand against assaults from American territory.

Dr. Manuel Artime was reported in Nicaragua, jumping off place for the disastrous 1961 Cuba invasion which he led. He was reported conferring with Nicaraguan President Rene Schick and former President Luis Somoza, both outspoken foes of the Castro regime.

Mr. Artime, secretary general of Revolutionary Recovery Movement, one of the largest anti-Castro groups here, said before his Miami departure, "We are leaving the United States to establish a base in Central America."

"In much less than one year we'll be flipping inside Cuba," added the 34-year-old physician-revolutionary who once fought the Fulgencio Batista regime alongside Fidel Castro.

"We'll fight guerrilla style. It will be a war 'A la mambisa.' This means with the tactics used by outnumbered band who fought in the hills for independence against Spain starting in 1868.

Currently training with the United States Army in Fort Benning, Ga., and expected back in Miami soon are Jose and Roberto San Roman and Erneido Oliva, military commanders of the Bay of Pigs invasion. There are persistent reports among exile leaders that they will join the Artime movement.

Exiles reported that anti-Castroites already were in training near Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua. They said this came to light after the accidental death during maneuvers of a youth of English and Panamanian parents, George Sampson White, last week. The reports said Americans were training the men, including Cubans, other Latin Americans and Americans.

G. Harvey Sumner, United States Government co-ordinator of Cuban affairs here, said he knew nothing about the report.

A new exile group known as Cuban Military Units, made up of Bay of Pigs veterans and other Cubans who recently completed training in the United States armed forces, reported 400 members plan anti-Castro operations from a secret Caribbean base.

Free Cuban Commandos, another recently organized group, is ready to go to Central America for assaults on Cuba, said its head, Tony Bustillo.
